“ My brother James passed away in late January. I was sad to hear the news but when I visited to try and settle his estate and spread his ashes, I was comforted to realize that he had died not friendless and alone but loved and on his own terms. He was fiercely independent and would not tolerate aid or comfort even as he realized he was dying. This would not surprise those who knew him. He joins my other younger brother Christopher. May he rest in peace with access to the music of the grateful dead. His sister Barbara and I will remember him as long as we live and his nieces and nephews as well. Peter Barry
